SCRIPT/NARRATION Hi. My name is Annie and I am a somewhat normal human person. If you are a human on the planet earth, and not a rock monster from Pluto, you have probably been asked the question...		"What do you want to be when you grow up?"		Now, let's be real, if someone asked you that, they probably didn't care about the answer nor were they taking you seriously. First of all, this is just something people who don't know how to talk to kids use to break the ice and second, if a child tells you what their job is gonna be years from now, will you take the, seriously? No. They're a kid.

What do you want to do when you get out of high school?	I know, I am just a lowly freshman but seriously.	What do you want to do when you get out of high school? I'm pretty sure I'm going to school graphic arts but after that, I have absolutely no clue what I'll do. And to be honest, the very thought of not having to go to school anymore terrifies me.

SCRIPT/NARRATION I've spent like 70-80% of my life at school. That's mostly because my mother was a counselor at my elementary school so even before I started school there, almost every teacher knew who I was already.		I don't know about you, but I've spent so much of my life having to do stuff for school, I don't know what I would do without it. But again, I'm a freshman so I shouldn't be worrying about that, right? We'll get back to that.		You know, there's this interesting concept in this book called Tough Call by Matt Popovits. Great guy, by the way, I met him in an elevator at a youth convention.

SCRIPT/NARRATION Matt has this theory that there are three types of decision makers. The instinctual, emotional and hyper-rational.	The instinctual goes with their gut feeling and doesn't really think about the decision that much. The emotional tries to go with what would make them happy. The hyper-rational does as much extensive research as possible to see what would be the most favorable outcome.			I consider myself an emotional. Which ever one you are, I know there's going to be some sort of stress.

SCRIPT/NARRATION For example, my philosophy on life comes from Daniel Avidan, which a lot of people who know me will know that he's one of my favorite people.		"Do it because you love it and don't ever give it up." This is a great way to live but it brings up fears.		Like what if I can't find a stable job in this field? What if I have to work at McDonalds for the rest of my life? What if those years in college to get a degree are put to waste? What if I have to live with my parents, jobless? What if... what if... what if...

SCRIPT/NARRATION But what if none of that happens? What if I get a perfectly fine job working as a video game designer or making a cartoon with a team of people?		Can I tell you something about growing up? Nobody knows what they're doing. Truth is, we never know what's going to happen. Nobody has Future powers...		If you do, please hit me up but I don't think anyone has future powers.

SCRIPT/NARRATION And whatever happens, you'll still be you, hopefully, and you'll be ok. You just need to stop being so afraid. So I guess the point of this video is that nobody knows what the future holds but you shouldn't stress about it. At least not to the point of breaking. Or else you'll break into a million pieces and you can't make any decisions.		And I know I'm talking about how you shouldn't stress too much about it but I'm not saying that's because your parents are going to figure it out for you. No, you have to make a decision and it's kind of a big deal.		You could be a salesman, or a doctor, or a musician, or you could start a YouTube channel, or literally almost anything you want. You have to make some sort of action though to get it started.

SCRIPT/NARRATION So thanks for listening and remember, don't stress too much but don't be a lazy sack of potatoes waiting for things to work out on their own.
